

PRIVACY COLLECTION STATEMENT

We collect personal information for the website subscription portal. This includes:

- your name and email address
- your subscription preferences

See the APMC privacy policy on our website here for further details about our privacy practices.

Australian Reinsurance Pool Corporation (ARPC) is a public financial corporation established by the Terrorism and Cyclone Insurance Act 2003 to administer the terrorism reinsurance pool, providing primary insurers with reinsurance for commercial property and associated business interruption losses arising from a declared terrorist incident.

Since 1 July 2022, ARPC has also operated a reinsurance pool for cyclones and related flood damage.

ARPC collects your personal information (when you fill in a subscription preference form on our website) under the Privacy Act 1988.

What personal information does ARPC collect when you subscribe on our website?

The personal information we collect is your name and email address, together with your subscription preferences for News Updates, Job Vacancies and/or our Newsletter.

How do we collect your personal information?

Your personal information is collected on the website subscription form.

Why do we collect your personal information?

The purposes for collecting this information are:

- to allow you to express a preference for information you wish to receive
- to allow ARPC to send you information you have requested

What if you do not provide the requested information?

Use of the subscription form is voluntary, however, if you do not complete a subscription form you will not be able to express your preference for information.

Does ARPC disclose your personal information to anyone?

ARPC will only disclose your personal information to another entity if required to do so by law, a court order or with your consent.

ARPC will not disclose your personal information to anyone overseas.
